

Asian Success in Mathematics: an Australian Perspective

TAYLOR, PETER.

Asian success in mathematics has been achieved in many areas, from the classroom evaluations of TIMSS, PISA, through competition results and at the elite level at the International Mathematical Olympiad. The reasons for this are not well understood, sometimes by the successful countries themselves. The speaker, who travels to some of these countries frequently, will provide some perspectives on this phenomenon, including the potential value of such success.